Upland City Council moves closer to approving refuse rate increase

The Upland City Council grudgingly moved close Monday night to finally approving a request by C.V. Disposal Service for 30 percent more revenue sought since last September.

Although no formal vote was taken during the work session on the refuse contract, four of the five council members expressed a willingness — however reluctant — to raise refuse rates.

But the council made it clear to Al Simonian, general manager for C.V. Disposal, that the increases were tied to his pledges for improved service.

Only Councilman Bill Bottin said he could not approve the rate increases.

Bottin continued to insist that the firm provide more detailed financial information about operations in Upland.

"I haven't heard anything really new here tonight, other than what I've heard before," he said, referring to three previous hearings on the refuse rates.

"I for one certainly am not in a position to make a recommendation one way or another," Bottin said.

Approval of a revised schedule of refuse rates will be before the council Jan. 15. City Attorney Donald Maroney said the new rates could go into effect Feb. 1.

Owners of single-family homes would pay $7.22 on their water bills every other month under the proposed rate schedule. That rate is 24.5 percent higher than the current rate for homes with garbage disposals and 11.1 percent higher than the charge for homes without garbage disposals.

The new rate schedule ends lower rates for homes with garbage disposals because relatively higher rates in sewer rental charges for these homes were eliminated during increases effective last October.

The rates for apartments and condominiums would be $6.90 for the first unit and $5 for each additional unit. These increases are about 19 percent higher than current charges for units with garbage disposals.

Proposed commercial rates vary, with increases of 28 percent and higher.

Several council members said the new rates are comparable with nearby cities.

The council members indicated they were well aware the rate increases could be an unpopular decision, particularly in light of residents' complaints about C.V.

Disposal's performance.

"I have more calls and letters on this matter than anything else since I've been on the council," said Mayor George Gibson, who has served on the city council since 1964.

Simonian said "publicity" and "exposure" of the refuse rate question prompted many of the calls as the issue has dragged on for more than three months.

He added that it is unfair to judge C.V. Disposal by its performance during the last three weeks because of the refuse problems posed by Christmas trees and other holiday discards.

Simonian stressed that he personally follows up on many residents' complaints. He and council members noted residents create many of the problems by failing to meet Upland's packaging requirements.

Simonian said the disposal firm needs the added revenue to get approval for bank loans to buy $250,000 worth of equipment now and another $250,000 worth in two or three years. The new equipment is vital to improving service, he added.

He outlined a nine-point program for improving refuse service in the city. This program includes bringing in a veteran supervisor, stressing geographic responsibility to particular employees for their areas, possibly introducing a pilot program of supplying receptacles, following up customers' calls and holding weekly meetings with employees on service and safety.

The council balked at agreeing to C.V. Disposal's request for extending the current refuse contract five years beyond its expiration date in May 1981.

Council members strongly indicated they want annual certified audits of the refuse operations

Along Euclid Avenue

Upland council extends building moratorium

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Upland City Council last week extended a moratorium by 150 days on accepting most applications for new development on Euclid Avenue from the San Bernardino Freeway north to Eugene Court.

City staff sought the extension to give the planning department more time to develop guidelines for future uses along Euclid.

Concern by Upland officials over proposed conversions of residential property to commercial use prompted the moratorium.

Upland's previous 90-day moratorium expired Dec. 30.

Bob Nastase, city planning associate, said the planning department has collected most of the information needed for its study but could face delays once staff begins focusing on possible recommendations and residents make their views known.

"Once we've collected all the data, we're going to try to develop action plans."

"When we present a study with alternatives to the planning commission, there may be controversy that will cause us to do more study before a report comes to council and action might be taken," Nastase said.

He said the planning department hopes to present its study to the planning commission within 90 days, but added the review would probably take longer to reach the council.

Nastase noted the planning department is taking a "block-by-block" look at Euclid from the freeway to Eugene Court (located just north of Foothill Boulevard).

He added that staff members are reviewing historic, architectural and scenic aspects of Euclid. Nastase said students from California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, are assisting in the study.

Euclid Avenue is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

Before the council meeting, Planning Director Bill Young said specific recommendations have not yet been drafted but will probably include some zone changes.

Although most of the buildings along Euclid Avenue now are single-family homes, much of the zoning is for commercial use.

Young said the possible zone changes would be aimed at retaining residential use for certain properties in the future.

Proposed conversions of residential property to commercial uses prompted the study, but Young also noted commercial zoning is a stumbling block for homeowners seeking to make additions and improvements on their houses.

He added that a current traffic study of Euclid Avenue by L.D. King Co. Inc. of Ontario will show some properties ill-suited for retail-commercial uses generating heavy traffic.

Lower levels of commercial use might be appropriate in those cases, Young said.

Applications for single-family homes and projects under review before Oct. 2 are exempt from the provisions of the ordinance.

Young said he does not know yet if the study will recommend banning one-lot conversions from residential to commercial use.

Minimum parking requirements and lot widths for commercial properties are being studied with an eye toward possible code amendments.

Most homes located in commercial zones have narrow frontages restricting commercial use in single-lot conversions and hampering parking and access.

City officials have also expressed concern over mixed land uses as some residential properties are converted but others are not.

Staff members had recommended a 90-day extension of the moratorium, but City Attorney Donald Maroney noted the council was permitted only one extension under state law.

The council voted 4-0, with Frank Hoover absent, to extend the moratorium 150 days to cover time needed to complete the study and public hearings.

Young said the planning department's work load prevented completion of the study in the original 90 days. The current moratorium will expire June 1.

Upland firemen get good marks in study

An independent study of Upland's fire defenses gives the city good marks overall, but points to the need to improve its fire prevention program and to buy an aerial platform truck.

Fire Protection Engineers of San Francisco completed the 62-page study late last year.

The consulting firm concluded, "The municipal fire defenses of Upland are considered good to excellent."

"The fire department is well staffed and equipped to deal with potential fire protection problems at hand and those anticipated in the immediately foreseeable future. With some adjustments, service can be improved at low cost."

Among the report's recommendations are:

— Building code amendments be adopted to strengthen "built-in fire protection" so that the "maximum unprotected building size and height will be limited."

The study recommends requiring installation of automatic fire sprinkler systems in future buildings where the potential fire threat exceeds the fire department's fire flow capacity, water delivery of 4,000 gallons per minute.

Retroactive installation of automatic sprinkler systems is recommended for existing buildings where fire flow exceeds 4,500 gpm.

— The report calls past fire prevention efforts "sporadic and limited in effectiveness," and urges continuation of recent efforts to improve the program.

— Upland should acquire an aerial platform truck costing about $115,000 plus annual personnel costs for manning the equipment.

The truck would strengthen Upland's ability to fight fires at tall buildings or structures with large floor areas.

— Public paramedic service should be introduced to the fire department in cooperation with private ambulance firms' continued presence in the city.

In authorizing the $8,500 study, the Upland City Council said one of the purposes was to find out what the city might do to lower fire insurance premiums in Upland.

The Insurance Services Office (ISO) — trade association for fire insurance companies — is scheduled to rate Upland fire defenses early this year.

The study estimates Upland can expect a rating improvement of at least one class compared to the last ISO evaluation in 1965.

Upland currently is a Class 6 city for fire protection, and Fire Protection Engineers says the city would be a Class 5 today and Class 4 with the recommendations outlined.

However, in an apparent discrepancy, the report estimates Upland would already be a Class 4 city in its category-by-category analysis of fire protection strengths and weaknesses.

Fire Chief Don Justis said the report contained no surprises for the fire department, and added that the study indicates Upland is "moving in the right direction" to improve fire protection.

Youth sports impasse

No alternative seen to raising players' fees

Organizers of a youth sports group in Upland see little alternative so far to increasing players' entry fees to baseball leagues to generate funds to pay playing field electrical bills passed along last year by the city.

Citizens for Youth Activities (CFYA) elected Bob Spalding president of the youth sports lobby Monday night at Hawkins Field.

Other officers named were: Bill Bussey, vice president; Len LaFontaine, secretary, and Paul Rohaly, treasurer.

After the meeting, Bussey said Upland's PONY and Colt leagues (for youths aged 13-16) have little chance of raising some $5,500 extra needed to pay for lighting and other electrical costs this season at Hawkins Field and Upland Memorial Park other than through higher entry fees.

He criticized the city for failing to help the leagues find ways to meet the extra cost since the council refused to restore city funding Dec. 4.

Bussey noted the baseball leagues' request to provide field maintenance in exchange for the city paying the electrical bills was rejected at a meeting with Upland officials later in December.

Mayor George Gibson, who attended that meeting, said Monday the CFYA proposal was complicated by mandated employment practices.

He explained that in order for the city to save the necessary funds on field maintenance Upland would have to lay off several employees hired under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Federal funds pay for the bulk of these employees' salaries and benefits. Gibson noted CETA employees must be laid off before permanent city employees.

Bussey noted the baseball season is fast approaching for the two leagues, with signups beginning in late January and early February.

Asked about possible fund-raising events, he commented, "We're about fund-raised out as far as raising money for us."

He also said most managers and coaches cannot devote any more time off from work to organize such events and added that the leagues already approach local businesses as sponsors.

Bussey estimated entry fees for PONY League could be increased to $35-40 from the current $25 charge, with the Colt League fee perhaps increasing less.

He said the higher fees would mean some boys will not be able to join the leagues.

Bussey said CFYA is proceeding with plans to formally incorporate as an organization and selected a committee to draft bylaws.

He added that the group will continue to talk with city officials about funding arrangements, possibly including bingo, and work toward bringing other youth sports leagues into CFYA.

Panel to seek volunteer crossing guards

The Upland Traffic Safety Advisory Committee has ruled out hiring school crossing guards and is exploring ways of finding volunteers to meet increased requests for guards in the wake of school busing cutbacks.

Committee members have determined that pedestrian and vehicle traffic at the intersection of 15th Street and San Antonio Avenue meets the city's guidelines for a crossing guard.

Police Chief Coy Estes said the intersection is the third the committee has found so far where traffic is heavy enough to need a crossing guard.

Last month the committee said guards are needed at Seventh Street and Mountain Avenue and 16th Street and San Antonio.

Upland now employs two crossing guards, one at Seventh and San Antonio and the other at 11th Street and San Antonio.

Estes said other intersections are likely to meet traffic flow standards when reviewed by the committee with Peter Liu, Upland's traffic engineer.

Estes — who serves on the committee along with other city representatives, school district officials and PTA members — noted the city might eventually need seven or eight crossing guards.

He said cost and the difficulty of finding people who will work five or six hours a day for $2.30 an hour led the committee to reject hiring crossing guards.

Upland Councilman Bill Bottin said Tuesday night the cost for hiring one guard for a year comes to $2,580.

The council directed city staff members to work with the newly reorganized traffic safety committee to explore ways of finding volunteers.

Demand for school crossing guards increased last fall when the Upland School District cut busing districtwide from 1,800 students to 900 students following passage of Proposition 13.

Estes said the committee is looking into three possibilities for volunteer crossing guards.

Residents, Upland Police Department Explorer Cadets and students are being considered as possible volunteers, he said.

Estes said a committee delegation of five representatives, including Liu, will travel south in about a week to examine a volunteer crossing guard program of the San Diego Unified School District.

He noted the district apparently has run a successful program using elementary-age students as crossing guards.

"It's hard to imagine giving them that responsibility," Estes said, referring to the young crossing guards.

Estes said any crossing guard program is unlikely to start before the new school year this fall, although he held out some hope for an earlier start if "all the information can be put together."

The police department will be in charge of training the crossing guards and making follow-up checks on their performance, he added.

68,720 wilderness acres proposed for forest

Pending approval of Congress, the U.S. Forest Service plans to add 68,720 acres of wilderness area to the San Bernardino National Forest.

Announced Thursday, the proposal would add 15.1 million acres of public forest land nationwide. Almost 900,000 acres would be in California.

An additional 139,500 acres in San Bernardino would be designated for "multiple uses," which permits recreation, timber cutting and grazing. Another 65,515 acres would be set aside for "future planning."

The additional wilderness areas would include:

- A new wilderness area of 30,400 acres in the Sheep Mountain region in the Angeles National Forest north of Pomona and the San Bernardino National Forest.

- An addition of 5,100 acres to the Cucamonga Wilderness Area.

- The creation of the 11,700 Granite Peak Wilderness about eight miles east of Big Bear Lake.

- Three additions to the San

Director appointed

Robert Martinez, 37, has been named executive director of Patton State Hospital at a salary of $28,500.

His appointment was announced Monday in Sacramento by David Loberg, director of the state Developmental Services Department.

Martinez has been acting director of Patton for four months, replacing Ken Clewett, who retired.

He began his state career at Camarillo State Hospital in Ventura County as a psychiatric technician 16 years ago. He eventually became an administrator of that hospital and also worked at Stockton State Hospital in San Joaquin County.

Gorgonio Wilderness, including a 22,320-acre addition in Raywood Flats, the Whitewater River drainage on the southeast corner of the wilderness.

Acres defined as wilderness cannot be developed and is intended as places of solitude. Nonwilderness can be developed for harvesting and recreation.

The proposal is the result of an 18-month review which identified roadless areas in the national forest system. Those areas were defined as consisting of at least 5,000 acres lacking major structural developments.

Conservationists have criticized the plan as not going far enough, and timber industry spokesmen have said the plan would cut back U.S. lumber production.

A spokesman for the Wilderness Society said his group was "disappointed" by the plan. "Our wilderness areas are a priceless national heritage, yet the Forest Service has seen fit to protect less than one quarter of them," said William A. Turnage, executive director of the society.

Sears gives grants to local colleges

Grants totaling more than $108,050 will be distributed this week by The Sears - Roebuck Foundation to 43 privately supported colleges and universities in California, according to A. L. Linse, Sears - Roebuck Foundation representative in Pomona.

Among others, grants will go to Claremont Graduate School, Claremont Men's College, Claremont University Center, Harvey Mudd College, Pitzer College, Pomona College and Scripps College.

OIA replacement runway given okay by airport board

Preliminary plans for construction of a replacement runway at Ontario International Airport were approved by the Los Angeles Board of Airport Commissioners Monday.

To be constructed to handle the tremendous weight of wide-body jets, the new east to west runway will be located 700 feet south and 2,200 feet east of the existing main runway.

Daniel, Mann, Johnson and Mendenhall, the firm which prepared the preliminary plan, was given the go-ahead to proceed with the preparation of a more detailed final plan.

Airport authorities are currently expecting a contract for construction of the runway to be awarded in April for work to be completed in October of 1980.

The total cost of the project, including taxiways, flood control channel modifications and lighting, is estimated at $15 million.

Chaffey district seniors fall below average in spelling test

By GLENN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Chaffey Joint Union High School District seniors fell short in spelling but kept pace with fellow California seniors in reading, written expression and mathematics test scores last spring.

Their average spelling score on the California Test of Basic Skills was slightly below the range of scores of the middle 50 percent of seniors in districts considered to be comparable.

The Chaffey average on the spelling test was 66.6 percent correct compared to a range of 66.9 to 68.9 percent correct for seniors in the middle 50 percent of comparable districts.

When the scores were presented at a school board meeting Monday night, district officials said spelling is largely a subject that should be learned before high school.

"Spelling is pretty basic. If it's not learned at the elementary level, it's pretty hard to catch up at the high school level," said Robert Erickson, assistant superintendent in charge of instruction.

The results were presented for each of the five comprehensive high schools in the district as well as for the district as a whole.

They compare the district and individual schools to other California districts and schools that are similar in community economic makeup and sixth grade achievement test scores.

Developer opens headquarters

Lewis Homes and its affiliated companies have combined their headquarters facilities into 18,000 square feet at North Mountain Professional Park, 1156 N. Mountain Ave., Upland.

"The move will give us the amount of corporate space we need for our expanding construction projects in the months and years ahead," said Richard A. Lewis, president of both Lewis Homes and Lewis Development Co. The latter firm is the builder of the $3 million North Mountain Professional Park.

The Lewis offices occupy one of the four structures in the 72,000 - square - foot complex. Another houses General Telephone Co. facilities, while two wings of the center are open for lease as medical and dental suites and commercial - related offices.

Ontario — Reading 57.8 compared to 54.7 to 58.1 range, written expression 54.6 compared to 53.2 to 56.6 range, spelling 61.9 compared to 63 to 66.2 range, mathematics 59.5 compared to 55.9 to 59.7 range.

Upland — Reading 65.3 compared to 64.5 to 67.3 range, written expression 65.3 compared to 63.2 to 66.2 range, spelling 68.3 compared to 68.4 to 71 range, mathematics 69.7 compared to 67.6 to 71 range.

Alta Loma Junior High certificates given

A fitting climax to a successful first trimester at Alta Loma Junior High School was the awards assembly held on that campus recently.

Certificates of honor were presented to deserving students by many of the teachers as an award for special achievement in the various academic pursuits offered at Alta Loma Junior High School. Honor roll students and those youngsters having earned an outstanding grade in citizenship by all their teachers were also honored with certificates.

The highlight of the assembly came when the Warriors of the Trimester were announced.

The seventh grade boy so honored was Michael Johnson, son of James Johnson; the seventh grade girl chosen was Karen Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Perry; the Gas shortage called air quality danger

By PETER WONG
Staff Writer

WEST COVINA — A chronic shortage of unleaded gasoline would undo years of effort in cleaning up Southern California's polluted air, the South Coast Air Quality Management District board was warned Friday.

Such a shortage would force the use of leaded gasoline in cars equipped with catalytic converters, making those pollution control devices virtually inoperative.

The failure of those devices would release hundreds of tons of pollutants throughout the four-county South Coast air basin.

Air quality could then worsen "as early as next summer," Jack Nevitt, the district's director of evaluation and planning, told the board.

The board authorized its executive officer, J. A. "Jeb" Stuart, to take the steps required to avert a shortage, although Stuart said, "We're not predicting a shortage."

Spot shortages of unleaded gasoline were reported in Southern California late last year, particularly at Shell Oil Co. stations.

Catalytic converters have been part of most American-made cars starting with the 1975 models.

As newer cars replace older ones, the demand for unleaded gasoline in Southern California is expected to increase — from 60 percent of all gasoline sold this year to 90 percent in 1985.

The staff report on the air quality impact of a shortage of unleaded gasoline was requested by Dr.

Thomas Heimsheimer, a Rolling Hills City Council member and vice chairman of the district board.

Heimsheimer, a physicist, asked for the report after he found the 1978 "smog season" was "even worse than what the weather indicated it should have been."

District officials have termed 1978 the worst year in this decade for air quality in Southern California.

The report indicated that a significant percentage of late-model cars in California are being "intentionally misfueled with leaded gasoline." The estimates range from 5 to 15 percent.

"This would quickly destroy the effectiveness of the catalyst in reducing hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions from these vehicles, thus increasing contaminant emissions and seriously affecting exhaust control efforts."

If the trend goes unchecked, "such an increase could wipe out five years of progress in air pollution in this area," the report says. "We'd be losing the war," Heimsheimer said.

Furthermore, the increased pollutants would force the calling of third-stage smog alerts. During such alerts, virtually all industry is shut down and most traffic is restricted.

The board authorized Stuart and the district staff:

— To explore the possibility of federal and state guarantees for the allocation of enough unleaded gasoline to satisfy clean-air requirements in Southern California.

— To ask for stricter enforcement of the federal law that forbids use of leaded gasoline in cars with catalytic converters.

— To work with government and industry to avert wide price differences between leaded and unleaded gasoline.

— To enlist public support for the exclusive use of unleaded gasoline in cars with catalytic converters.

— To make certain that a proposed state program for the annual inspection of cars provides for an adequate check on catalytic converters.

Modern-day immunization plan keeping polio under control

By RITA BUSBY
Staff Writer

A reported polio case in Alameda County will cause little concern in San Bernardino County, according to the department of health.

Because of the success of last year's community immunization program, 88 percent of the school-age children in the county have been inoculated against the disease, according to Dr. Donald Rice, chief of disease control for the department of health.

Rice said the circumstances surrounding the Alameda County case are so rare that duplication would be next to impossible.

The Alameda County case involves a 33-year-old father who allegedly became infected with the disease through an inoculation given his infant son.

The father has become paralyzed and is being treated in a respirator.

Rice said he knows of no other cases of an adult in the state catching the disease under such circumstances.

However, Rice said it is known that many people become infected with the disease without serious side effects, or without ever knowing they have contacted a simple case of a polio-like-related disease.

Some may even become infected through inoculations given their children which manifests itself in flu-like symptoms, he said.

Rice said there is simply no way of knowing how many persons contact the disease in simple form, or in an inoculation-like manner, and who never even know it.

The vaccine fed children isn't a live polio virus, but one that has been cultured to a degree that the possibility of its manifesting itself is "one in several million," Rice said.

Doses of the tame virus are generally given an infant at 2 months of age, then at one year and then another before entering school.

Rice said there is no need for further doses of the vaccine because the disease usually strikes those under 18 and the third dosage would be effective that long.

For that reason it was given the name "infantile paralysis," during its heyday in the 1930s, 40s and early 50s.

The last reported case of polio in an adult in the county was in 1970.

The National Committee on Immunization Practices recommends that no one over 18 take the polio vaccine, since it was discovered a few years ago that adults often times get a reaction to the tame virus.

But Rice said that if the disease became rampant again the chances of getting polio would necessitate the inoculation of adults.

SACH elects new staff president

Walter Frank Korcek, M.D., has been elected medical staff president for 1979 by the medical staff of San Antonio Community Hospital. He succeeds Edward Pottoff, M.D.

A general practitioner, Dr. Korcek has held many committee appointments at the hospital. He currently serves on the executive and emergency committees and along with the presidency, accepts a three-year appointment to the board of trustees.

Dr. Korcek joined the hospital staff in 1952, following graduation from the University of Loma Linda and an internship at the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, Staten Island, N.Y.

"Many of the people in the community are interested in better health and wish to receive more information in regards to better living," said Dr. Korcek.

"A violation, or breakdown, in the natural laws of health will lead to sickness and poor health. A wise use of water, food, exercise, rest, better eating habits and divine aid can lead to better health and a longer life. More people have died because of lack of exercise than because of exercising," he added.

"Our staff has now grown to over 200 physicians," continued. "Our aim is to render the best possible care to our patients and inform them of a more healthful way of life. In the coming year, we wish the community that the hospital serves a good and better health."

Elected with Dr. Korcek were: Hurley Robinson, M.D., president-elect, and Mark Kirk, M.D., secretary.

Freeway hearing Jan. 26

Foothill Freeway supporters and opponents will have their long-awaited chance to state their arguments to the California Transportation Commission, nearly a year after they were promised a hearing.

The hearing will start at 8:30 a.m. Jan. 26 in the council chambers of San Bernardino City Hall, 300 N. D St.

Under regular commission procedures, a three-member panel reviews items on the commission's agenda a day before the nine-member commission meets.

Normally, public comments are heard and agenda items are discussed only by the review panel. Then the full commission acts on the items.

The procedure reportedly will be changed in the case of the Foothill Freeway. The full commission is expected to sit as the review panel.

The hearing is scheduled for a Friday so that the area's state legislators can testify personally.

Because the full commission will sit as the review panel, it is not expected to decide that day whether to order a full-scale review that could lead to the route's removal from the state freeway system.

Transportation Director Adriana Gianturco has already urged the commission to order such a review.

Freeway supporters say a review is unnecessary and the route should be reaffirmed as part of the state system. The freeway corridor proposed for review (California Highway 30) would run 28.3 miles, from La Verne to Interstate 15E in San Bernardino.

Of that corridor, 17.4 miles of it fall within four foothill communities — La Verne, Claremont, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga. The commission's new

Your Good Health & Chiropractic

Dear Doctor:

Recently my son fell off his skateboard. As usual, he was going down the sidewalk at a pretty good clip, so he took quite a fall. Like most kids, he got right up and got back on the contraption, but I noticed that he is walking with a slight limp. Do you think he might have injured his back when he fell? Mr. T. L.

Dear Mr. T. L.: Frankly, I inwardly cringe every time I see a youngster riding a skateboard. Even if they don't fall off and break an arm or a leg, they are in a very real danger of twisting their back or hip out of alignment simply by the very nature of the activity. Remember, one foot is on the skateboard while the other is moving back and forth from skateboard to sidewalk, street or whatever. Human nature being what it is, kids tend to use the same foot for locomotion day in and day out, constantly pulling the respective hip lower than the other.

This unnatural posture places a severe strain on the spine and pelvis and the muscles and ligaments that support them and hold them in place. If the skateboard enthusiast is a teen-ager, the postural problems are often further complicated by the strange positions they find in which to sit for hours on end while watching TV or doing their homework.

Such positions tend to distort the spine, causing a displacement of the vertebrae. This in turn pinches the nerves which emerge from openings between the vertebrae and carry messages from the brain to all parts of the body. These nerves cannot function properly until the condition is corrected and the vertebrae are restored to their proper alignment. The results of a pinched nerve may be immediately apparent, such as a sharp pain in the back when you try to lift an object that is too heavy, or they may not be noticed for months or even years.

However, the damage has been done whether or not there is any outward sign of trouble. It is entirely possible that your son's problem is merely a strained muscle which will heal with time, but it is equally possible that he may have suffered a spinal injury which could have serious consequences in the future. I urge you to arrange for a Chiropractic spinal check-up for him as soon as possible.

OMSD hires outside firm to lead search for superintendent

By KEN SWART
Staff Writer

Despite the protests of two board members and teacher association representatives, the trustees of the Ontario-Montclair School District voted to hire a private consulting firm to help locate a replacement for departing Superintendent Jack Jones.

In a split decision, the board voted 3-2 to hire Hilton D. Bell, a private consultant based in San Clemente who screened and recommended the hiring of Jones six years ago. His fee is approximately $2,000.

Applicants will be vying for the job of superintendent, the district's top position, vacated when Jones accepted a job in a private company in December.

Trustees Bill Hennie and Kathy Brugger voted against hiring an outside consultant to do a job they both said could be handled just as effectively by district personnel more familiar with the needs of the district.

"We're talking about spending money we shouldn't be spending at this time," Hennie said, noting the voters' overwhelming approval of Proposition 13, which indicated district costs should be kept to a minimum.

"We have qualified people in the district who are capable of doing the interviewing and screening for the position," Hennie said, "and since they have a vested interest, they could probably do a better job."

He added, "The only thing a consultant or consulting firm will do is come in cold, with no knowledge of the district, and advertise for the position."

"We're living in a dreamland if we think they won't be biased in their choice," Hennie said. "They have their cliques, their favorites and they know where to go" to find candidates.

Mrs. Brugger added, "My argument is with the money. I would like to go with the consultant if it's under $2,000, but I can see now that it doesn't look like we can."

Trustee Sam DiGiovanni, the most outspoken in favor of hiring the consultant, noted Hennie's arguments that people qualified to handle the job of superintendent were already employed in the district.

"If the best person for the job is in the district now, and if after everything was said and done he came out on top, then I'd say great for the district," DiGiovanni said.

He responded to teacher association arguments by indicating, "Teachers have in the past voiced positions against hiring a consultant. But regardless of how educated they are, there are times when these people ask for a consultant" to help them with a federal program.

"We feel we need professional help, just as they do on occasion," DiGiovanni said, adding that almost $90,000 was spent in 1976-77 for consultants to help teachers administer federal programs, and the figure was about $40,000 in 1977-78.

"Because of the magnitude of the position and the amount of money a superintendent will be handling, I know of no other fair way to find the right person for the job other than hiring a professional consultant," DiGiovanni said.

Beverly Cowan, Ontario-Montclair Teachers Association president, noted that when a new program is being considered in a school a needs assessment is usually conducted first, and suggested the same method be introduced before a consultant is hired.

"At least we would now the needs of the district—how enrollment and unification will affect it," Mrs. Cowan said. "There's no reason to rush things with so much groundwork still to be done."

She repeated Hennie's comment that there are qualified people within the district capable of handling the interviewing and screening process without the hiring of a consultant.

Ontario-Montclair district and CSEA reach agreement

After more than half a year of negotiations, a declaration of impasse, and the use of a mediator, a final contract has been reached between the California School Employees Association chapter 108 and the Ontario-Montclair School District.

The CSEA membership and the OMSD board both approved the final contract unanimously in late December, finalizing the first contract negotiated between the association and the district through collective bargaining.

The association represents non-certificated employees, who do not teach but perform other functions within the school district. Most are employed as bus drivers, custodians, secretaries, cafeteria workers, classroom aides and maintenance men.

Trustee Sam DiGiovanni noted, "I'd like to thank them (the CSEA) for getting this thing over with, and I'd like to compliment them for handling themselves so professionally."

The two-year contract allows the association to renegotiate any monetary item plus another item of its own choosing after one year, according to the chairmen of the negotiating teams.

Charles Robar, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel and chairman of the district negotiating team, said the district was "pleased it's a two-year contract with re-openers—it's a beneficial way to go."

The multi-year contract, rather than a one-year contract, creates a period of "employer-employee harmony and gives both sides an opportunity to work for the kids," Robar said.

Brenda Hemry, association negotiating team chairman, said she was very relieved to have the contract completed and added, "I'm sorry we didn't get agency shop but for this non-money item we'll probably ask the district to renegotiate it with us."

Mary Ann Foschi, association president, noting the significant increase in fringe benefits offered in the new contract, said, "A lot of members said take the money and go for agency shop later."

Mrs. Hemry, a secretary at Ramona School, explained that agency shop is a concept that requires all school district employees represented by the association to pay dues to the association, whether the employees become members or not.

Association officials argued that if the association is required by state law to represent any employee during a labor dispute or grievance, all employees should pay regular membership dues to the association, regardless of whether they choose to belong to the association or to call themselves members.

"Most agency members feel the same way—everyone should pay their fair share," Mrs. Foschi said.

Mrs. Foschi, a secretary in the district accounting office, noted that these items were most important in the contract:

— Partial medical benefits for retiring employees.

— A split-shift differential giving additional pay to employees who have regular split-shifts.

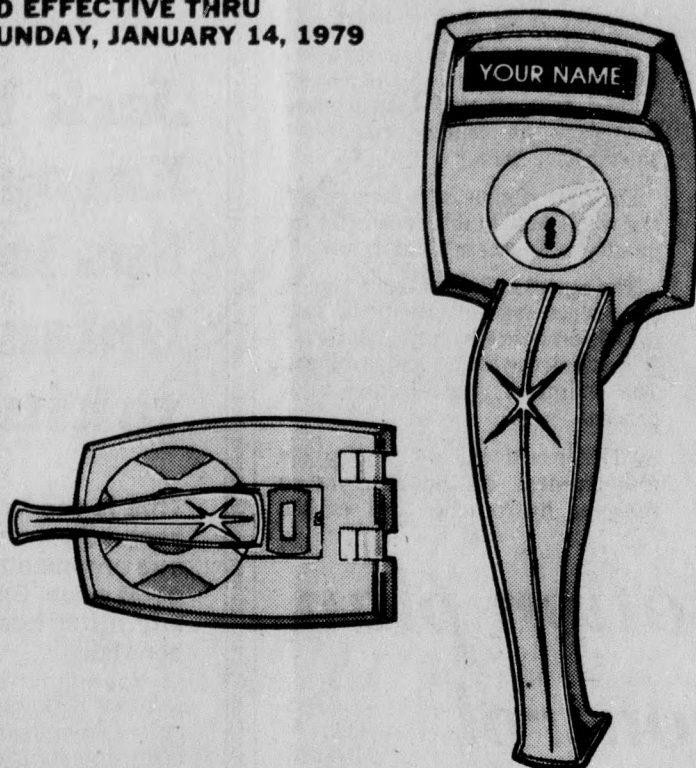

— An increased fringe benefits package to make up for the inability of the district to give salary increases.

— A better transfer policy requiring the district to notify an employee in writing before a transfer to another job location is made.

Civil engineering projects

Group seeks landmarks

Examples of historic civil engineering projects in San Bernardino and Riverside counties are being sought for nomination as landmarks.

The History and Heritage Committee of the San Bernardino Riverside Counties Branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers will research the projects.

One or more will then be nominated for landmark status in competition with projects from other parts of California and the United States, according to Gene Ebe, committee chairman.

Ebe's committee currently is preparing a paper on the Washington Survey Monument located near Mt. San Bernardino in the San Geronio Wilderness Area. The Big Bear Lake Dams, Mill Creek, Santa Ana Hydroelectric Plants and the Colorado River Aqueducts are among local projects that already have been designated landmarks.

Ebe's committee will meet Jan. 9 at 5:15 p.m. Persons wishing to attend the meeting or nominate projects may contact Ebe at 313-1036.

Ebe is a surveyor with the San Bernardino County Public Works Agency. A native of Wisconsin, he now resides in San Bernardino and is a graduate of San Bernardino Valley College and the University of Redlands.

Inquire before you retire

A major milestone for most people is retirement after a lifetime of work. It often means shifting to lower gear while adjusting to more free time and probably less money, according to A. Lorraine Brannen, district manager in Pomona for Social Security.

It is possible to check by mail with Social Security to determine if a person is eligible for benefits in 1979, even while still working. Persons within 90 days of age 62 or older can complete the coupon below and mail it to:

Casa Colina Hospital plans Rehabilitation Act workshop

A one-day workshop regarding the provisions of Sections 503 and 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act will be held in Inglewood Feb. 23.

Business administrators, compliance and affirmative action officers, building planners and facility directors will find the session helpful.

The workshop entitled "Opening Doors for the Handicapped: Providing Reasonable Access," is sponsored by the Teaching Center of Casa Colina Hospital for Rehabilitative Medicine, Pomona.

Faculty includes Rachel McKinnon, employment standards administrator, U.S. Department of Labor; and members of Grove, Fishman and Associates, consultants to industry, education, and health for the disabled.

Issues of recent and evolving legislation, regulations, codes, mandatory building modifications, and the elimination of architectural and career barriers will be discussed. Resources, procedures for employment of handicapped persons, and recommendations for restructuring and effective remodeling will be presented.

The workshop will be held at the Airport Park Hotel, Inglewood. Registration is now open at the Casa Colina Hospital Teaching Center, 593-7521, extension 247. Registration fee is $65 per person if received before Feb. 1, and $75 thereafter.

Similar workshops will be held at the Host International Hotel, Sacramento, Feb. 15, and at the San Jose Hyatt House, San Jose, Feb. 16.

Mother, daughter workshop

A workshop designed to help mothers and daughters deal with their generational conflicts will be held Saturday, Jan. 20, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at California State University, Los Angeles.

Dr. Jill Steinberg, a clinical psychologist who will lead the workshop, said mothers and daughters often have special kinds of differences which interfere with their closeness, and that the workshop will facilitate the opening of communication between the generations.

Although the workshop is especially suited for mother-daughter pairs, particularly daughters who are high school or college age, individual mothers or daughters may attend without their partners. There is a fee of $40 per couple or $25 per individual.

Reservations should be made by calling the Cal State L.A. Office of Continuing Education at 224-3501.

Mid-life job changes

Career classes slated

The Mid - Life Center at Chaffey College will begin two career redirection groups for adults Jan. 16 and Feb. 6. The career redirection groups are designed to help adults between the ages of 30 and 55 who are interested in changing careers or getting started in new jobs after being out of the labor market for some time.

The format for the groups includes vocational and personal interest testing, skills and strengths identification, values clarification, and locating and using resources.

One group will be held 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays on the Chaffey College campus, 5885 Haven Ave., Alta Loma. The group will begin on Jan. 16 and run for nine weeks in the human services center, Campus Center East, room 49-C.

A second group will meet at the Ontario - Montclair Center, 4650 Howard St., Ontario, 9-11 a.m. starting Feb. 6 and running for nine weeks. The group meets in room 23 at the center.

Both groups are free, and no pre-registration is necessary. Funding for the career redirection groups has been provided by the U.S. Office of Education, Vocational Education Administration.

The Mid - Life Center also provides personal counseling by appointment, and sponsors classes which explore topics such as divorce and separation, assertiveness training, and adult sexual issues.

For more information about the Mid - Life Center call 987-1737, extension 253 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Families needed to sponsor 1979-80 exchange students

American host families are being sought for 500 Scandinavian high school students from Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland for the school year 1979-80, in a program sponsored by the American Scandinavian Student Exchange.

Interested families in this area should contact Judith Walraven, 144 N. Van Ness Ave., Los Angeles, Ca. 90004 or telephone (213) 469-9755. Letters should contain the writer's telephone number.

The students, age 16 and 17, will arrive in the United States in late August, attend the local high school, and return home in late June, 1980.

The students, all fluent in English, have been screened by their school representatives in Scandinavia and have pocket money and medical insurance.

Also, American families interested in hosting a Scandinavian student, age 16 to 18, during five weeks this summer, June 21 to late July, are being sought. The 200 students in this program will not attend school.

American families with small children are welcome to participate in the program.

The exchange group also is seeking American students, age 16 to 18, who would like to spend a high school year with a Scandinavian family or participate in a five-week family stay in summer 1979.

Persons interested should contact Walraven immediately.

The ASSE is the official Swedish high school exchange program in the United States operating under the auspices of the Swedish Board of Education. The program is officially designated as an exchange-visit program by the U.S. State Department.

Since 1938, more than 150,000 students have taken part in the student exchange, home stay and school exchange programs in the United States, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Germany, France, England and Switzerland. ASSE has representatives in all areas of the United States.

Medallions being sold

Commemorative medallions for the golden anniversary of the Madonna of the Trail are being sold at an Upland store through the San Antonio Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR).

Skinner's House of Accent, 260 N. Second Ave., is carrying the silver, bronze and aluminum (silver-like in appearance) medallions.

Store hours are 9:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. Monday-Saturday. A representative of the DAR will usually be at the store.

The DAR is helping plan a three-day celebration Feb. 10-12 of the statue's 50th year on the Euclid Avenue median north of Foothill Boulevard.

The medallions are also available by mail. Checks to the San Antonio Chapter, D.A.R. should be mailed to P.O. Box 353, Upland 91786.

Prices are: silver, $13.25; bronze, $3.71; and aluminum, $1.06.

Senior Citizens

Senior citizens are you ready to start the New Year by brightening your life and your mind?

The West End Senior News, edited by Anne Brower and provided as a service through the West End United Way, suggests seniors enroll in one or more of the classes offered during the winter.

"Ontario and Upland Recreation Departments have some classes that require a fee and some that do not," the bulletin reported. "The series of classes at Ontario and Chino libraries, sponsored by the Chaffey College home economics department, are a terrific bargain," Brower noted.

Elderly, a Chaffey College credit class, will be presented in the Ontario City Library on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Jan. 2 through March 20. Students will learn human relations, communications skills and practical skills as applied to the aged.

Crochet classes will be held every Tuesday from 11 a.m. to noon at the Ontario City Library.

Rancho Santa Ana Botanic Gardens in Claremont will train docents (nature interpreters) beginning Jan. 12 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at the garden. Call Bonnie Busenberg at 627-1917 for more information.

"The Compleat California Consumer Catalogue" available for purchase for $1.50 from the Department of Motor Vehicles, 222 S. Mountain Ave., Upland, or at college bookstores.

Tax help

Volunteers willing to assist seniors and low-income people prepare their income tax forms receiving training at one of two locations. The Municipal Courts Employees Lounge, 350 W. Mission Blvd., from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Jan. 15. Call Nelson Lortie, Pomona Senior Citizens, 623-6822, extension 278. Training will be offered at the Ontario Library Jan. 20 and 27 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Call Harry Sippel of the Upland Recreation Department. The American Association of Retired Persons pays a small stipend for the training if volunteers comply with IRS request to be of service.

Transportation

Dial-a-Ride and Dial-a-Lift in San Bernardino County has connected services with Get-About in Los Angeles County for the elderly and handicapped.

Seniors can travel from their front doors in Ontario, Upland, Chino, Rancho Cucamonga or Montclair to any place in Claremont, Pomona, La Verne and San Dimas or visa versa by transferring from one system to another at Montclair Plaza or Indian Hill Shopping Center. The services operate weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost of fare is 25 cents per city in San Bernardino County and a donation of 50 cents in Los Angeles County with an Omnitrans pass or Get-About card.

If you have an appointment such as with a doctor, call Dial-a-Ride or Dial-a-Lift the day before.

The phone numbers are: Dial-a-Ride 629-3018, Dial-a-Lift 620-1902 and Get-About 593-7511. Dial-a-Ride operates between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Bus passes can be applied for at the following locations: R.T.D. Pass application, Human Resources Building, 217 S. Lemon Ave., bring a self-addressed, stamped envelope; and Omnitrans Pass (for Dial-a-Ride and Dial-a-Lift) first and third Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to noon, Ontario City Library.

Take a trip

Senior citizens in the area are invited to join the Montclair Senior Citizens on upcoming trips.

A trip to Lake Havasu is planned for Jan. 29-31. The three-day trip will include a boat ride on the lake, a side trip to a Nevada casino and a trip to a ghost town. Cost of the trip is $49.50 per person.

An overnight trip to San Diego is planned for Feb. 15-16. A visit to Wild Animal Park, Hotel Del Coronado and a city tour of San Diego will be included in the trip. The cost of this trip is $42.50 per person.

For more information regarding these trips contact the Montclair Senior Citizen Center at 626-8572, extension 239.

Despite Prop. 13

Classes packaged to lure participants

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

All sorts of classes, tours and cultural art features will be presented this quarter by the Chaffey College Community Services.

Proposition 13 may have stopped the opportunity to offer most of these free to West End citizens, but Barbara Cherbak and Edwina Kellner of Community Services have put together a package to lure those interested in non-credit classes to participate for nominal fees.

Some of the classes, such as diet and exercise, sewing, knitting and crocheting are free.

C.A. Sheppard is department head, and said, "One of the most traumatic effects of Proposition 13 has been the removal of state financial support for adult avocational classes which makes it necessary for these classes to be self-sustaining. The Chaffey College governing board adopted policies and procedures to administer self-sustaining classes and place a $1 per hour of instruction per person charge on these classes.

"Every attempt will be made to be sure the classes are offered in a cost efficient manner while at the same time, offering the students the opportunity to experience a wide variety of short term classes, workshops, seminars and other community services events."

Tours are an innovative offering this year. Mrs. Cherbak said and these include the following: a whale watch boat trip on Jan. 27; Chinese cultural tour to Los Angeles, Feb. 9; black achievement tour in Los Angeles, Feb. 16; tour to garment district in Los Angeles, Feb. 19; tour to Hall of Gems, March 3; and a bonus package of bus pickup in various West End points to see "The Taming of the Shrew" on March 9 at Chaffey College's Little Theater.

These tours are limited to 40 persons and information about registration and fees is available by calling 987-1737, extension 275 or 276.

Topping the cultural arts presentation will be the exhibit at the Wignall Museum-Gallery on Jan. 12, 8 p.m., of "The Five Colors of the Universe." Displayed will be costumes and symbols from the Ch'ing Dynasty. The exhibit will continue through Feb. 26 and is free.

In the music area, the Chaffey College Jazz Ensemble Winter Concert, directed by Jack Mason, will give a free concert on Jan. 19, and on March 18, Joyce Shannon will direct the Choral Concert. A fee will be charged. Both will be at 7 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus.

"The Taming of the Shrew" by Shakespeare is the presentation of the theater arts department on March 2 and 3 and March 9 and 10, all with an 8 p.m. curtain in the Little Theater.

A film, "The Ruling Class" (1972) with Peter O'Toole will be shown Jan. 26 and 27 at 7 and 10 p.m. in the Little Theater by Ken Koenigshofer. An admission charge will be asked for the play and film.

A "Sunday at 7 Seven Series" will include free lectures in the Little Theater, open to the public. Virginia Eaton and James R. Pahl will talk on "The Rex W. Wignall Museum-Gallery" on Jan. 21. They will tell about the past exhibits held there, the museum-gallery's history and origin and future plans.

"Tales of East Africa" will be the lecture on Feb. 4 by Dr. Henry E. Childs Jr. and "Nonverbal Behavior - The Silent Message of Power, Responsiveness and Immediacy" by Janet Portolan and Dr. John Caputo will be held on Feb. 25.

Three chances for registered dental assistants to take coronal polishing (cleaning of teeth) and earn a certificate will be held Jan. 2 to 23, Jan. 30 to Feb. 20 and Feb. 27 to March 20. Lecture demonstrations, laboratory and clinical application of coronal polishing will be given by Elizabeth Rose and Jackie Clark. The fee will be $35 for each session. Call 987-4484, extension 276, for registration information.

The free classes include: diet and exercise at Chino Community building, designed for senior citizens, on Monday and Thursday from 10 to 11 a.m. taught by Barbara Tosha; sewing from Jan. 15 to June 18, De Anza Community Center, De Anza Park, Ontario, from 9 a.m. to noon, taught by Jerry Newman, and from Jan. 19 to June 22, from 1 to 4 p.m. Fridays, at North Fontana Neighborhood Services Center, Fontana, also taught by Mrs. Newman.

Three workshops will be offered for fees while one will be free.

"Goodbye," a seminar for learning about loss through divorce, death and dying or job loss will be Saturday, Jan. 20, from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the college Forum. Jan Movey will instruct.

Shareen Lawrence, foreground, is the guest curator for the 1979 opening exhibit at the Wignall Museum-Gallery at Chaffey College on Jan. 12 at 8 p.m. The exhibit, "The Five Colors of the Universe," will feature costumes and symbols from the Ch'ing Dynasty. Mrs. Lawrence is looking at one of the hand-embroidered Chinese garments which will be exhibited. In the background, Ginger Eaton of the gallery staff, folds a garment. The public is invited to the opening reception. The exhibit will run through Feb. 26. Docent tours are available. (Staff photo)

Food Processor and Microwave Oven sessions will be held Feb. 3 from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., also in the Forum with Keo Teghtmeyer and Carol Bennett as instructors.

Writer's Day will be held March 17 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. in the Forum with Kathy Henkins as instructor. Ray Bradbury will be guest speaker. Bradbury is a popular science fiction writer and author of over 300 short stories.

A fee will be charged for these workshops, but the workshop on "Rape - The Crime and Its Prevention and Criminal Justice System Procedures" on March 9 will be given free. This workshop will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the college. The place will be announced at a later date.

Two films on nutrition will be shown at the church at 5 p.m. Saturday in keeping with the declaration of 1979 as "Year of Health Emphasis." There is no charge to see the film and the public is invited.

L.V. Brethren Methodist

The La Verne Church of the Brethren recently announced several personnel changes on the church staff and reorganization of the church board, commissions and musical programs.

Melody Stallings of Wenatchee, Wash. has assumed the position of youth director. She is a student at the Claremont School of Theology and has attended La Verne College.

Imogene Hanawalt of La Verne was appointed church bookkeeper. She was former junior accountant for Reardon and McCallum in Upland and statistician and transcript evaluator for the University of La Verne admissions office.

Robert Neher was re-elected church board chairman. New commissions chairpersons are: Robert Frick, trustee and property commission; Mary Neher, worship and witness commission; Jan Baum, fellowship commission; and Michael Welch, stewardship and finance commission.

Continuing chairpersons are Nancy Brandt for the Christian education commission and Mary Blocher for the missions and service commission.

Dale Covington is director of the Sunday morning choir and Shirley Heckman now directs the children's choir with the assistance of Ruth Popcock.

New sanctuary

Community Free Methodist Church of Chino has dedicated a new sanctuary building at the corner of Ramona and Chino Avenues.

The building is the culmination of the merger of two area churches, one in Pomona and one in Chino. The Spanish-design sanctuary seats 300 people. The interior is of redwood and antique oak highlighted by rust color.

Architect is James Lundy of West Covina. General contractor is George Lightner of Alta Loma.

Staff jobs, officers

Street, Ontario.

Presbyterian

The Yacht Club Mariners of the First Presbyterian Church of Upland installed officers for 1979 at the regular "cruise" Friday night.

The Mariners hosted 80 members of Monte Vista Grove Homes, Pasadena at the unit's December meeting.

The Grove is a facility for retired Presbyterian ministers, missionaries and their spouses.

Individual homes and apartments encourage independent living for the retired people, whose average age is 98.

This is the 12th year the Mariners have hosted a Christmas party for the Grovers.

8 Reasons Why You Should Buy Now At Moran's

1. Our Everyday Low Prices

It's a fact! Our "regular" prices are lower than most sale prices! Our 20-store buying power and direct mill purchases mean genuine savings for our customers. When you need custom draperies, compare our quality, service, and price before you buy. You will save money, and enjoy the finest in custom window treatments. Yes, at Moran's, every day is a sale day!

2. Our Decorators Are Trained

When you phone for our Window Magic Service in your home, you can be confident that a professionally trained decorator will respond to your call. We insist that all of our sales counselors be trained to offer custom window treatments the Moran way. They will help you with fabric selection and window treatment planning at no extra cost!

3. Our Fabrics Are Tested

At Moran's you can select from over 250,000 yards of the finest quality drapery fabrics. We pre-test every pattern for performance and draping ability. Only those passing these tests are added to our selections. We guarantee these fabrics for one year against fading. We will replace faded custom draperies without charge if they are reported to us within one year from the date of installation. In addition, all custom drapery fabrics are guaranteed for five years against sun deterioration on a pro-rated basis, for the re-selection of new draperies.

4. Our Workmanship Is Superb

We have one of the largest and most modern workrooms in the West. We make custom draperies that are truly custom in every detail. The fabrics are candled before cutting. Each step of the fine tailoring, including seams, hems, and headings, is checked to meet our high standards. You can actually see the difference in draperies from Moran's.

5. We Have Our Own Installers

Every Moran store has its own custom drapery installer. He is a highly trained professional and a full time employee who is personally responsible for installing your custom draperies in your home with professional care. We do not use independent contractors to install custom window treatments.

6. We Service What We Sell

We may be "old fashioned," but we still believe in serving what we sell. This might mean having one of our expert seamstresses re-hem a drapery in your home at no charge, or having our service manager come to your home to solve a window treatment problem. If it should occur, Draperies are our business and we have built this business with exceptional service.

7. Your Satisfaction Is Guaranteed

As a matter of fact, most of our custom drapery orders are delivered to the customer with complete satisfaction. However, if there is a breakdown in service, and you cannot get satisfaction through your nearest Moran store, you can phone us direct on our toll-free "hot line" and your problem will receive top priority for a satisfactory solution. We value our reputation for complete customer satisfaction above any other consideration. We know a satisfied customer is one of our best advertisements. That's why we guarantee your satisfaction.

8. We Have 41 Years Experience

We have made millions of pairs of custom draperies during the past 41 years for homes all over Southern California. As the "Window Magic People," we've learned a couple of things are true. First, there really is no substitute for quality, and secondly, our customers are our most important asset. Yes, you really can buy now from Moran's, with confidence!

PDQ Bach festival planned at college

Three performances of outrageous musical fun are planned by the Cal Poly Pomona music department, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, when it will present "A P.D.Q. Bach Festival."

P.D.Q. Bach (1807-1742?) was the last and least of the 20-odd children of the great Johann Sebastian Bach, and certainly the oddest of the lot, according to Professor Peter Schickele, the originator of P.D.Q. Bach. Of these children P.D.Q. Bach was "also the least understood, since there was so little to understand. He lived an exceptionally pointless life which is mirrored with amazing fidelity in his music," says Schickele.

P.D.Q. Bach's prolific output "Bagpipes, Bicycle and Balloons," and "Sinfonia Concertante for Bagpipes, Left - handed Sewer Flute and Double - Reed Slide Music Stand." Music to be performed in the Cal Poly concerts will be P.D.Q. Bach's great oratorio "The Seasonings

(1 1/2 tsp.)," two madrigals from the Triumphs of Thunelda: "The Queen to me a Royal Pain doth Give" and "My Bonnie Lass She Smelleth;" and "The Stoned Guest (a half - act opera)."

The entire forces of The P.D.Q. Bach Festival Orchestra and chorus will assist.

All performances will take place in the recital hall 101 of the music building on the Cal Poly campus.

Ticket reservations are recommended for the P.D.Q. Bach concert, as seating is limited. Reservations or further information should telephone the Cal Poly music office at 598-4587.

Young gnu joins zoo

This little brindled gnu was born July 17 at the Los Angeles Zoo. "Young gnus are very strong and can stand up seconds after birth," said animal keeper Nancy Carnes. "In their natural environment, newborn gnus have to keep up with the herd and follow their mothers closely." These clumsy-looking antelope live in the plains of East Africa. The baby and rest of the gnu herd can be seen in the hillside exhibit area at the Los Angeles Zoo.

Dancers to perform in concert

RIVERSIDE — A dance inspired by an eccentric old woman, who appeared in an empty parking lot every morning with a grocery cart full of crocheted packages, highlights a concert by Dance L/A at the University of California, Riverside, Jan. 20.

The performance is scheduled for 8 p.m. in University Theatre on the UCR campus. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Ticket Office (787-4331).

Choreographer Ronnie Brostman says his "Homage to a Red Crochet Lady" is in memory of the woman he saw each day dressed in layers of wool crocheted lace who "seemed to carry her whole world with her and within this private world maintained a dignity the world around her had lost."

First retrospective exhibition of photographer's works given

RIVERSIDE — In 1923, Alma Lavenson asked the owner of the local camera store to show her how to develop the film she was taking with the small folding Kodak camera she had bought to make snapshots of family and friends.

By 1927, the Kodak had been replaced with a 3 1/4 - by - 4 1/4 reflex camera and her first published photo appeared in Photo - Era magazine.

More than a half century later, her works have hung alongside those of famed photographers Ansel Adams and Edward Weston in the great museums of the country and she is considered one of the pioneers of modern photography.

The first retrospective exhibition of her 40 - year career has been assembled by the University Art Gallery at the University of California, Riverside. More than 100 of her prints will be shown beginning Jan. 8, and Lavenson will attend a reception in her honor there at 8 p.m. Jan. 12.

Open to the public at no charge, the exhibition ends Feb. 16. Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays.

Her early efforts were landscapes and urban and industrial subjects near her Oakland home. She was one of four photographers invited by Adams, Weston and the now famous f/64 Group to exhibit her work at the de Young Museum in San Francisco in 1932, an exhibition that successfully challenged generally held ideas about photography and changed its course.

In the 1930s and 1940s, Lavenson turned her attention to the Mother Lode of Northern California, the gold rush country where her mother had been born. A string of old mining towns in the Sierra foothills had been discovered by tourists, but much had survived from the mining days through isolation and neglect. She began a visual documentation of the fragments from that era that was to produce over 200 photographs.

Staff Writer

Life in Washington, D. C., is a distinct contrast to life in Covina for Jackie Lloyd.

Mrs. Lloyd's husband, Jim, won his third bid as District 35 Congressional representative last November. After being home for several months, they have flown back for the 96th session of Congress.

"The problem with two homes is keeping everything straight," Mrs. Lloyd said. "I may think I have my brown shoes and purse in the same place, only to find the shoes are in Washington and the purse is in Covina."

"I can't keep things straight," she laughed. "I'm a person who has a place for everything and everything in its place, but with two homes, that is difficult."

In Covina, she has a seven-room, 2½ bath home with a big yard. In Washington, the Lloyds have a one-bedroom condominium of 900 square feet.

"When we're in Washington, it's

Distinct contrast

Life in Washington, D.C., differs from Covina

like we're staying in a hotel," she said. "We seldom eat at home, maybe Saturday night or Sunday — weekends are quiet in Washington."

She explained there are many breakfast meetings and luncheons to attend, though Mrs. Lloyd said she only goes to the ones where she is invited. "Otherwise, I catch a sandwich at the office and we'll have dinner out," she said.

The congressman's wife goes to the office with her husband every day. She is there from 8 a.m. to generally 10 p.m., "and never are we finished before 7 p.m."

Mrs. Lloyd is not employed by her husband, but handles the personal mail, personal bookkeeping (an office manager handles Lloyd's work account) and acts as an ambassador to visiting constituents. She has lost count of the number of tours she has guided through the Capitol and the city.

"Everyone who tours the Capitol leaves with a pride in their country and a better understanding of its democratic system," she said. "It is so important for young people to see Washington, and if I had my way, I'd send every youngster there to visit."

She described the expressions of awesome pride on visitors' faces when they see the Lincoln Monument for the first time.

"I get all tingly just thinking about it," she said.

The Washington social life of the Lloyds is interwoven with events which involve the congressman's work. "We go to a lot of receptions, but have been invited to only a few embassies. That's because Jim's committee work isn't involved in that direction," she said.

Receptions given by big business concerns, bankers and others are given often. Mrs. Lloyd admitted her husband prefers to walk in the front door, paste on his name tag, go through the reception line and out the back door.

"We've gone to as many as four receptions in one night," she said, "and we allow 15 to 20 minutes for each. Jim doesn't take me all the time because I can't walk away from people. I like to visit, but he wants to come and go as quickly as possible."

A social event Mrs. Lloyd will plan herself, as president of the California Congressmen's Wives, will be a luncheon to welcome the nine new congressmen's wives from the Golden State.

While in Covina from August until last week, Jackie Lloyd spent the majority of her time on campaign tours with her husband. Once the victory was won, she settled down to household duties. The yard needed attention. A decision was made to cut down a big tree, and more security measures were planned for the house. Even though the home has a security system hooked up to the Covina Police Station, Mrs.

Lloyd said she'd feel more secure with protection over some windows.

Having two homes to think about is part of being a congressman's wife, and Mrs. Lloyd takes it in stride.

But one thing which bothers her are critical remarks made about her husband, particularly those flung during campaigns.

"I resent the misrepresentations during campaign time and the difficulty of getting to those people where a bad seed has been planted. I will never be reconciled to such criticism," she said.

Even though she is in her husband's office every day, Mrs. Lloyd misses working side by side with Jim as when they ran a public relations business in Covina.

"I miss working as Jim and Jackie Lloyd — this is Jim's job and I help when I'm needed," she said.

The Lloyds' work in Washington may not be a Jim and Jackie routine, but it's a good guess the perky little lady, who "can't walk away from people," has made her impact on Capitol Hill as she has in the California 35th District.

Large dogs victims of hip dysplasia

By Robert L. Stear

The most popular pet nationwide seems to be the large dog. Commercial and private breeders can hardly supply enough puppies to fill the demand for German shepherds, boxers and other imposing breeds to guard homes and apartments.

Unfortunately, this demand is leading to careless selection of breeding stock by some suppliers. As a result, a condition called congenital hip dysplasia is showing up with increasing frequency.

Hip dysplasia is a hereditary disease involving improper development of the ball-and-socket joint of the hip. If the socket is too shallow or the ball too flat, a misshapen joint which tends to come out of place is produced.

Mild cases result in varying degrees of lameness. Severe cases cause the hip to fall completely out of the socket, so the dog can hardly walk at all. Arthritis can accompany the condition as the dog grows older.

The disease is most common in large and medium-sized breeds — the German shepherd, St. Bernard, golden retriever, boxer and Great Dane.

The cause is genetic, but very rapid growth, unbalanced diet and other factors may aggravate the condition. Among certain breeds, a majority of animals are affected by some degree of hip dysplasia.

Signs of hip dysplasia are not always immediately obvious in a young pup. The lameness and exaggerated toeing-out may not appear until the dog is 3-6 months old and is already an accepted member of the household.

As the disease progresses, the dog shows increasing reluctance to stand and may sit with the hind legs stretched out to one side at an unnatural angle. When the dog does move, it may have an abnormal walk, with a pronounced swaying of the hindquarters.

If a pet shows signs of lameness, make an appointment to see a veterinarian. With the help of an X-ray, the veterinarian will decide if the cause of the lameness is hip dysplasia or just a temporary injury.

If the dog does have hip dysplasia, the veterinarian can suggest several alternatives. In mild cases, pain relievers, rest and limited exercise will make the pet more comfortable.

If you wish, your veterinarian may be able to suggest an orthopedic surgeon to evaluate the dog and decide if surgery would help. In younger pets, where arthritis has not yet appeared, the hip can sometimes be reconstructed by surgery. In older pets, surgery may reduce pain and irritation, even though it will not restore the dog's normal walk.

To avoid hip dysplasia, ask to see the parents before selecting a shepherd or other large puppy. Also, examine the other puppies in the litter, since some affected animals show symptoms earlier than others.

Since 1966, some kennels have been registering their breeding stock with the Orthopedic Foundation for Animals, which certifies that they are dysplasia-free. Puppies from O.F.A. registered stock have a greatly reduced chance of getting the disease.

If a pet does develop hip dysplasia, it should not be used for breeding purposes, since this will only pass the trait on to another generation of dogs. Spaying or neutering of dysplastic dogs is definitely recommended.

(Stear is manager of veterinary services at Norden Laboratories.)

Medical society sets policy on child abuse

Guidelines for dealing with the medical aspects of child abuse have been developed by the California Medical Association. The principles emphasize:

- * The rights of children.
- * Preference for rehabilitation over punishment for the abusers.
- * The need for greater knowledge about the child-abuse problem, with state funding to underwrite such research and education.
- * The responsibility of physicians to continue to recognize and report child abuse.
- * Society's moral and economic interest in minimizing abuse of children.

CMA says children have "the right to be reared in a manner which optimizes their chances for physical, mental and emotional health. This right (imposes an) obligation on adult caretakers and society ... and it includes the concepts of supervision and control of children by their parents."

CMA says that society has the obligation "to provide substitute parents to children whose natural ones have been lost to them for any reason and to do everything possible to minimize the number of times that any child must shift allegiance from one parent figure to another."

Further, says the 26,000-member state medical association, children have "the right to skilled health care whenever needed and to skilled legal care when their basic rights are threatened or when there is contention about custody, placement, protection or dependency."

Other points in the CMA guidelines:

- Recognition "that infants and children are growing and developing rapidly and that patterns of character and behavior tend to become fixed early in childhood. This makes each case of abuse or neglect an urgent one. The family must be rehabilitated quickly by intensive family care. If rehabilitation is not possible, the child must be removed quickly ..."

Bounce flash a helpful technique

By JERRY WINDLE
Copley News Service

The technique of using bounce flash to simulate natural light can be very useful in making your pictures take on a more natural appearance.

The bounce flash technique is a rather touchy beast however, and there are several factors to take into account before attempting it.

It is not something you can do by merely pointing your flash unit at the ceiling and blasting away. There is a lot more to it, so here are a few basics.

What kind of flash will work best for this technique?

The ability to remove the flash unit from your camera and hold it in your hand will chances of success. Even in the use of direct flash photography, the ability to remove the flash to create modeling through the use of shadows will be a great help to keep your pictures from having that "flat-flash" look which is very unflattering to subject and photographer alike.

The advantage of the removable flash unit in bounce photography is that you can hold the unit closer to the ceiling. This in turn allows more light to be "bounced" or "reflected."

Bouncing the light from the flash unit off the ceiling will result in a loss of about two full f-stops, since the light is being reflected from a surface, diffused and then falling onto your subject. This is the reverse of the direct flash technique where the unit is aimed directly at the subject.

The height of the ceiling plays a very important part here. Normal ceilings are about 8 feet high. This is convenient for bounce flash since the standing photographer can extend the unit in his hand and get the flash within 18 inches of the ceiling

Some rooms have a 10-foot ceiling or even higher. This will affect the output of light drastically.

One of the first things to determine is the ceiling height. If it is too high, such as a church, train station or large auditorium, then forget about bounce flash altogether.

Another vital point of check is the color of the ceiling. Most are white, which is great for bounce flash, but some are green, blue or other light colors.

When using black-and-white film, these colored ceilings present no problems other than an added loss of light. But color film is another matter. The light being reflected from a blue ceiling naturally will be blue. You can imagine what this will do to a flesh tone. So check the color of the ceiling as well as the height. If the ceiling is colored and you are using color film, then you better opt for direct flash.

So now you make your bounce flash pictures and the exposures are good. But wait — everyone has black holes where the eyes are supposed to be. What happened?

Remember that all of your light is coming from overhead and people whose eyes are deeply set or have hair hanging over will have dark shadows in the eye area.

How can you prevent this? There are a couple of ways that will work. The easiest is to angle your flash so it not only hits the ceiling, but a wall, if it is close enough. This way your light will not only be coming from overhead, but from the side as well.

A little more positive approach is to hold a 3-by-5 inch white card in size behind the flash unit with the card extending beyond the unit. This will reflect some of the light directly forward when the flash is fired. The majority of the light will still go straight up to the ceiling and back down, but having the white card behind the unit, away from the subject, will reflect some of the light directly onto the subject. This should help get some light onto those dark eye sockets and foreheads.

There are other tricks such as to hold the unit behind you and point it at the ceiling at an angle toward the subject. The idea here is to bounce most of the light off the ceiling and have some fall directly onto the subject. Thus, instead of pointing the unit straight up, it is behind you, pointed at an angle toward your subject.

This technique is rather tricky to use. When it works well, and when it doesn't — no pictures, or at the least, very underexposed ones.

The bounce-flash technique will take more than this brief space to learn. I suggest you find a book that covers bounce flash and study everything you can before you attempt it.

But by learning to recognize the elements necessary for good bounce flash pictures such as low, white ceilings, it can be very useful and give your pictures a little more professional appearance.

The height of the ceiling is important when using the bounced flash technique. For color photography a white ceiling is best. The flash was bounced off the ceiling as well as partly off the wall to give a natural look to this photograph of a sculptor at work.

Taking home a truck full of snow from along Mt. Baldy Road Tuesday were Dave Broderick and Michelle Planellas, both of Ontario. The couple decked out the truck with a snowman before they headed back to the valley floor with their white bonanza. (Staff photos by Dan Carroll)

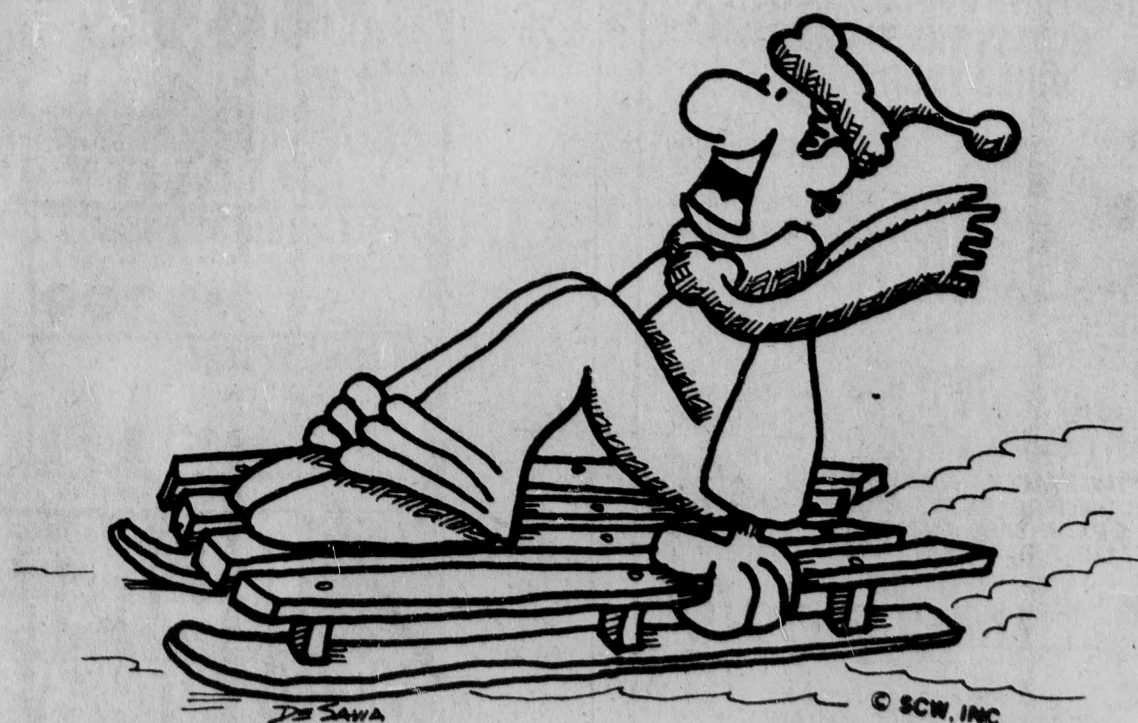

Storm turns Mt. Baldy into white playground

The recent snowfall at Mt. Baldy gave one West End family the idea of getting a snow picture shot for next year's Christmas card. Posing with the family puppy, Topo, Tuesday were the Alfonso Villanueva family of Claremont. The photographer on the job, right, was Villanueva's brother, Steve.

Sharon Goodwill, 16, of Ontario, and Ray Birch, 16, of Upland found a giant snow face when they arrived to play in the snow Tuesday at Mt. Baldy.

Tighter restrictions start March 1

Protection given 3 reptile species

Come March 1, 1979, hobbyists and private collectors will find restrictions on the take of native California reptiles and amphibians much tighter than they have been in the past.

Complete protection has been extended to three species of reptiles that are slowly losing ground in their fight for continued existence, and bag and possession limits have been applied to all native reptiles and amphibians not given complete protection.

Meeting Dec. 8 in Los Angeles, the California Fish and Game Commission, acting on a recommendation by the Department of Fish and Game, placed the California mountain kingsnake, the flat-tailed horned lizard and the island night lizard on the protected list that already includes the desert tortoise, the gila monster and eight other reptiles.

Protection for the three added species becomes effective March 1 when new sportfishing regulations adopted by the commission become law. Sportfishing regulations include reptiles and amphibians.

E. C. Fullerton, director of the Department of Fish and Game, said the mountain kingsnake had been added to the protected list through the efforts of DFG wardens and Dr. Glenn Stewart, an authority on reptiles at California Polytechnic University, Pomona.

"The mountain kingsnake," Fullerton said, "is one of a number of native reptiles taken extensively by hobbyists and collectors, who in many instances sell the snakes illegally."

"There is considerable demand for this snake and other snakes throughout the nation. We have reports that a mountain kingsnake may command as much as $150 on the market."

Fullerton said that in addition to depleting the limited population of mountain kingsnakes, collectors often cause damage to habitat through the use of pry bars and other devices for reaching the reptile.

The popularity of the kingsnake may be traced to its colorful appearance and the fact it is harmless to humans. It reaches a length of from 20 to 40 inches and has glistening scales and black, white and red rings, the red bordered on each side with black. In general coloration it resembles the venomous coral snake of the southeastern United States.

The flat-tailed horned lizard, one of the least numerous of the horned lizard (or horned toad) family, is found only in the dunes and sandy flats of the low desert from the Coachella Valley in Riverside County to the Gulf of California.

Acting on recent Bureau of Land Management studies that indicate a severely depleted population, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has taken preliminary steps toward including the lizard on the endangered species list.

A small reptile, which may grow to a length of two or three inches, the flat-tailed horned lizard is pale gray, buff or reddish brown in appearance. It derives its name from long slender horns that reach out from the back of its head and from a flat tail slightly larger in width than that of other horned lizards.

Predation by feral cats and the destruction of habitat by wild goats are the reasons for the decline of the island night lizard, found only on Santa Barbara, San Nicolas and San Clemente islands.

Earlier this year it was listed as a threatened species by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The island species, which is large by night lizard standards, grows to almost four inches in length. It may be identified by a mottled upper body of pale ash gray or beige and yellowish brown darkened in varying amounts with black. Less secretive than other night lizards, it is seen at times during daylight hours.

The new regulations establishing bag and possession limits offer a certain amount of protection from now on to all native amphibians and reptiles. Aside from those completely protected, the bag and possession limit is two, with six exceptions, all reptiles.

A limit of one was retained for the chuckwalla, California legless lizard, rosy boa, San Joaquin whipsnake and the two-striped garter snake. A limit of five was retained for the spiny softshell turtle which occurs in the Colorado River, this not to conflict with the Arizona limit, also five.

Under existing regulations there have been possession limits on only four amphibians and 18 reptiles.

Protected native amphibians are the Santa Cruz long-toed salamander, Siskiyou mountain salamander, desert slender salamander, Kern Canyon slender salamander, Tehachapi slender salamander, limestone salamander, Shasta salamander, black toad, California red-legged frog, south-western toad, Mt. Lyell salamander, yellow-blotched salamander, and large-blotched salamander.

There are special regulations for the bullfrog, a non-native species. Also, no one can legally take or possess the African clawed frog, a prohibited exotic species.

Camping reservations can be made earlier

Starting Feb. 1, group camp reservations at state parks, beaches and recreation areas will be available as much as 12 weeks in advance. At present, the earliest reservations can be made is eight weeks.

Reservations may be made as late as Saturday for the following weekend (starting Friday), but most group areas are reserved far earlier than that. Each group camp has a fixed fee, ranging from $10 to $40, and there is an additional $3 service charge for each group reservation. A youth group discount of one-half price is available except where group camps are restricted to youth groups only.

Both developed and primitive group camps are available. Developed group camps ordinarily include flush toilets, piped drinking water, tables, stove, improved roads and, in most cases, showers.

Primitive group camps ordinarily include roads cleared for access, chemical or pit toilets, an informal area with table, central water supply, or a designated area without facilities.

A group, for the purpose of group camping, is considered to be 10 or more persons and must not exceed the established maximum capacity for each group camp. Capacities of the group range from 30 to 200.

Group camp reservations are available year round at Big Basin Redwoods State Park, Brannan Island State Recreation Area, Folsom Lake State Recreation Area, Fremont Peak State Park, George J. Hatfield

State Recreation Area, Lake Oroville State Recreation Area, Leo Carrillo State Beach, McConnell State Recreation Area, Portola State Park, Refugio State Beach, Russian Gulch State Park, Saddleback Butte State Park, Salton Sea State Recreation Area, San Clemente State Beach, Silverwood Lake State Recreation Area, Sunset State Beach and Van Damme State Park.

Group camp reservations will be available for spring and summer use, with beginning dates ranging from March 1 to mid-June, at Calaveras Big Tree State Park, Caswell Memorial State Park, D. L. Bliss State Park, Humboldt Redwoods State Park, Malakoff Diggins State Historic Park, Millerton Lake State Recreation Area, Patrick's Point State Park, and Sugar Pine Point State Park.

The maximum length of time that may be reserved at a group camp is seven days.

Specific information about fees, group camp facilities, and opening dates may be obtained from the parks; from the State Department of Parks and Recreation, P.O. Box 2390, Sacramento, CA 95811; or from any Ticketron Office.

Group camp reservations requests may be obtained from any of these places and may be mailed with the fee to Ticketron, P.O. Box 26430, San Francisco, CA

Although reservations may be made up to 12 weeks in advance, mail orders will be accepted up to 13 weeks in advance and processed on the first day of the 12-week advanced reservation period.

Earliest reservations for family campsites remain eight weeks in advance.

Faster reservation service may be obtained by applying in person to a ticket outlet operated by the state by Ticketron. For outlet locations, call (213) 670-2311.

Brighten up those brown bag blues

Banish those brown bag blues. Brighten up any lunch with take - along sandwiches that are delicious and nutritious.

Whether you work in an office, on a construction site, or volunteer your time at a local hospital, you'll want to pack these portable feasts for noontime pleasure. Busy people on the go are discovering that the trick to making nutritious sandwiches in minutes is to use cooked frozen vegetables to add flavor and vitamins.

It's easy to add crunchiness to favorite sandwiches spreads without peeling, paring or chopping celery and carrots.

Be sure to try all of these super spreads. Kids will love Tuna/Brussels; dieting teens will relish the Creamy Cauliflower recipe and Mom and Dad will savor special Spinach/Egg Salad. Start with an assortment of breads. Sesame bagels or long - grain earth or yogurt breads are the newest favorites.

Build a double - decker delight that would please Dagwood. Start with miniature whole wheat or white loaves and alternate layers of your favorite fillings.

This tasty high - energy spinach spread is a winner.

For extra protein, cottage cheese and hard cooked eggs are combined with cooked frozen spinach.

A dash of Tabasco, chili or curry powder adds pazzazz to the spread.

Traditional tuna fish becomes a super sandwich spread when you try this Tuna/Brussels version. Frozen Brussels sprouts are simple to cook and add the necessary Vitamin C to any lunch.

Dieters will do well to carry these delicious vegetable spreads as salads packed in plastic containers. Be sure to bring an assortment of crispy crackers for dipping. For a really different spread, try this Creamy Cauliflower version. Cottage cheese makes it low in calories and high in protein; while cauliflower adds vitamins and a crispy texture.

To garnish these delightful lunch-box treats, be sure to pack separate foil packets of lettuce, tomatoes, carrot sticks and celery. Add your favorite fruit and an individual serving of peanuts or sesame seeds for a welcome crunch.

To avoid early-morning hustle and bustle, prepare the spreads and let the family pac, their own lunches the night before.

Carry your lunch in your briefcase or in a favorite canvas tote. To add elegance to an office lunch, keep your own placement and a favorite plate in your desk. For special occasions or to brighten any humdrum day, a lacy Damask napkin will add charm.

These spreads are perfect for home luncheons, too.

Tuna Brussels Spread
1 package (10 oz) frozen Brussels sprouts

3 package (3 oz) pimiento cream cheese

2 tablespoons liquid from dill pickles

2 tablespoons finely chopped dill pickle

1/4 teaspoon salt

1 can tuna (6 1/2 or 7 oz)

Cook Brussels sprouts as package directs. Drain and chop fine. Soften cream cheese, and blend in pickle liquid, pickles and salt. Drain and flake tuna. Add to cheese mixture, along with chopped Brussels sprouts and mix well. Makes 2 1/2 cups spread.

Hi-Protein Spinach Spread
1 package (12 oz) frozen chopped spinach

1 pint cottage cheese

1/2 cup mayonnaise

1 tablespoon onion powder

3/4 teaspoon salt

2 teaspoons chili powder

1/4 teaspoon curry powder

1 teaspoon prepared mustard

12 drops Tabasco

2 hard-cooked eggs, finely diced

Cook spinach as package directs. Drain well, and squeeze out as much liquid as possible. Put cottage cheese into covered blender, and blend smooth (or press through fine wire sieve). Mix in mayonnaise, onion powder, salt, chili powder, curry powder, mustard and Tabasco. Put in medium bowl, stir in spinach and mix well. Fold in diced eggs. Chill. Serve with crisp crackers. Makes about 3 1/4 cups.

Creamy Cauliflower Spread
1 package (10 oz) frozen cauliflower

1 pint cottage cheese

1/4 cup sliced green onion

2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

1 teaspoon basil, crumbled

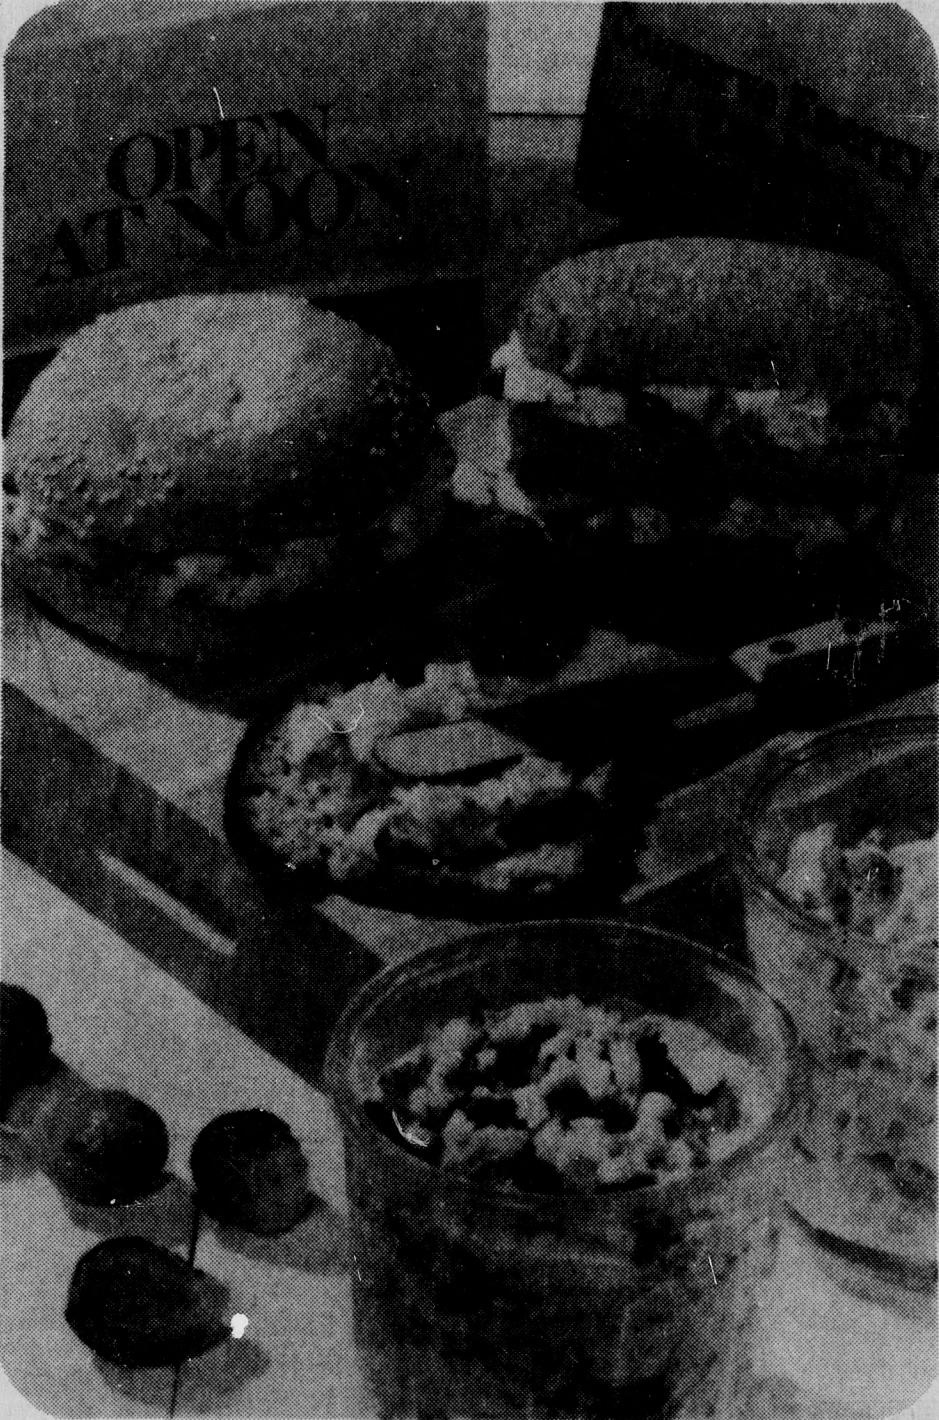

3/4 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon finely minced garlic

Cook cauliflower as package directs, drain and chop fine. Put cottage cheese into blender jar, blend smooth on medium speed, about 3 minutes, stop salt and garlic, fold in cauliflower. Chill sides of jar occasionally. Pour blended cottage cheese into small bowl, mix in onion, pimiento, basil, salt and garlic, fold in cauliflower. Chill thoroughly. Serve with crackers or toast triangles. Makes 3 cups.

It's easy to make lunch time fun with such delicious sandwich spreads as Tuna-Brussels and Spinach-Egg. Pack a portable feast in your favorite canvas tote or try brown bags with zany sayings to brighten up the day.

Water quality plans review date extended

The public review period for the Southland's water quality plan and its environmental impact report has been extended from Dec. 15 to Jan. 15.

"The purpose of this extension is to give the general public and governmental agencies additional time to review the plans," said James H. Wilson, Long Beach vice mayor and president of the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG).

SCAG is responsible for preparing the water quality plan, entitled the draft areawide waste treatment management plan, which contains proposed policies and actions to protect and enhance the quality of all ocean, inland and underground waters in the area.

The plan is designed to meet the federal government's mandate that "fishable and swimmable" waters be achieved by 1983, according to Wilson.

"A wide range of water pollution sources are covered by the draft plan," including construction and agricultural activities and urban wastes," he said.

Comments on the draft plan and its environmental impact report may be submitted to SCAG, 600 South Commonwealth Ave., Suite 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90005.

SCAG is a planning and coordinating agency which deals with regional problems, such as transportation, environmental quality and urban growth, affecting more than 10 million residents of the Southland.

Indian talk highlights meeting

Indian crafts and costumes made by Cub Scout Pack #41 of Alta Loma were featured at the pack's November meeting, with Don Clucas, an authority on Indians, as special guest speaker.

Cub scouts receiving bobcat badges included Robert Lee, Jeff Jansen, Robert Evans, Randall Farris, Dwayne Baters, David Kaiman, Aaron Hyer, Todd Orr, Darrin Kalm, Brian Oliver, Dale Wahl, Tim Payne, Scott Shallett, Brent LaRue, Norris Hanna and Eric Jedlick.

Earl Lilly and John Flagg were presented with wolf badges, and Gary Locotosth received his bear badge. Gold arrows were presented to Lilly, John Shaw, Flagg and Locotosth. Jerry Grishman and Lilly each received two silver arrows, with John Talo receiving one silver arrow.

One of the hardest hit programs in the post-Proposition 13 budget cuts at Chaffey College was evening classes. And night students who started school Tuesday found a smaller selection of more crowded classes, according to a college official.

Teddie Lopez, dean of instruction, said that the budget for part-time instructors was chopped in half, from about $800,000 last year to approximately $400,000 this year.

"The number (of instructors) has been cut rather drastically because this is where the biggest portion of the cuts were made as far as the staff was concerned," she said.

The loss in the number of instructors curtailed the selection of classes offered shrinking attendance, according to Mrs. Lopez.

"Yes, we have had a rather drastic decrease in (night) enrollments," she said, adding that the reduced attendance was not in proportion to the decrease in the number of classes. Hence, the larger class sizes.

Although attendance figures are not yet available, David Hafiz, dean of admissions and records, also thinks night attendance may have suffered.

"I would suspect it's down but I'm not certain," he said.

Some programs, such as real estate and management courses, depend almost entirely on professional people who teach part-time, said Mrs. Lopez, adding that these types of programs suffered most of all.

"We tried not to hurt any program too much," continued Mrs. Lopez, who said that the budget cuts in the programs "was an across-the-board type of thing."

Some full-time instructors have shifted their teaching loads and volunteered to teach at night, she said, which helped prevent the evening program from becoming even smaller.

This left a little more money for those programs which depended heavily on part-time teachers.

"We tried to kind of balance it out by giving some of these programs a little more than 50 percent (of their previous budget)," she explained.

Some lab fees and materials charges were increased but Mrs. Lopez said she does not think this has hurt evening enrollments because the higher fees are advertised in the college catalogue.

The situation is a little different in the California State College and University system where the budget is determined by the system's board of trustees who set fees for the entire string of schools.

At California State Polytechnic University at Pomona, evening attendance probably has not been hurt by budget cuts because the program is so small, according to George Hart, associate dean of the School of Arts (which includes fine arts and the humanities).

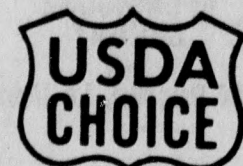

The trustees have ordered the universities to retain a larger portion of their salaries budget in reserve but "this probably has not had a substantial impact," continued Hart.

No fee increases will be implemented unless directed by the trustees and so far none have been ordered, he said.

Gov. Edmond G. Brown Jr. has told the university system to cut individual budgets by 10 percent which has caused much grumbling among university administrators.

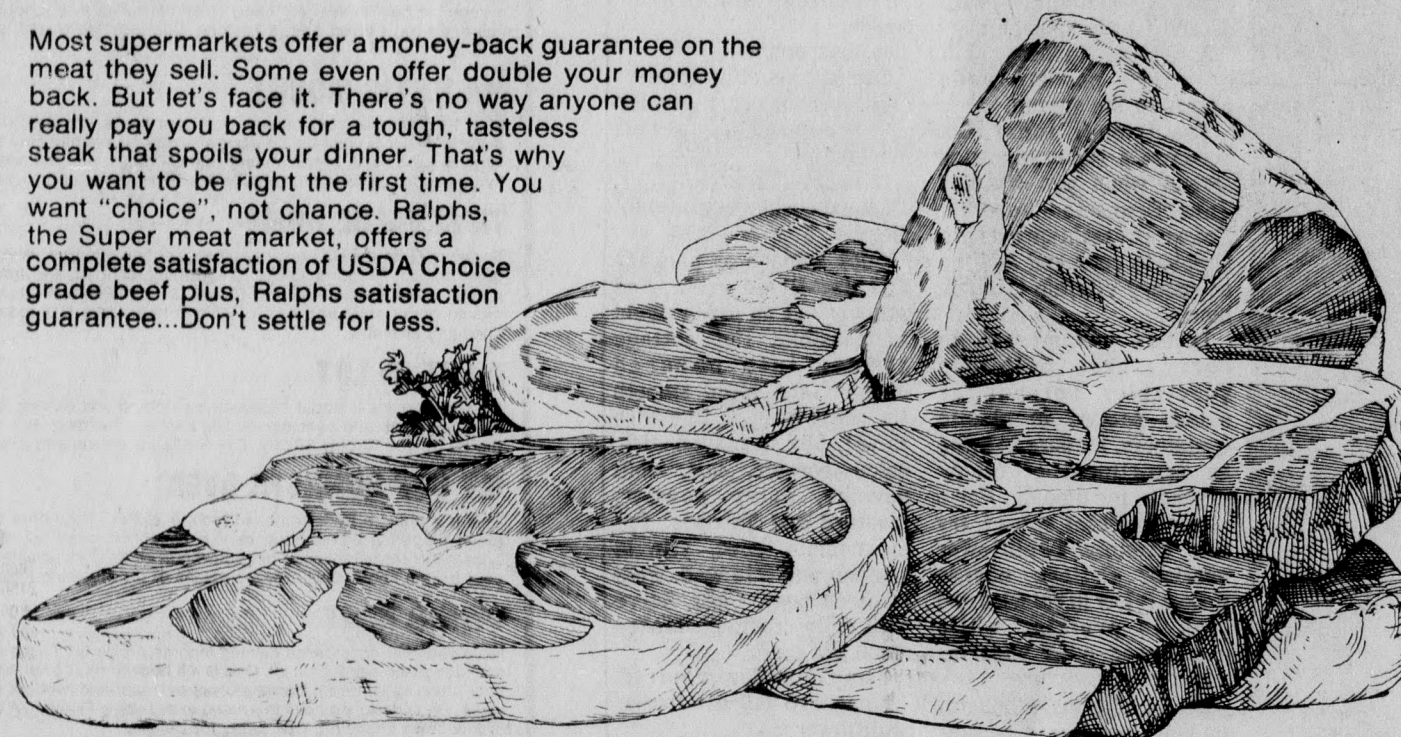

As for what impact is expected at Pomona, no one knows, according to Hart.

Ralphs USDA Choice Grade Beef... quality at super low prices

Don't settle for "guarantees" alone. Look for the word "choice".

Most supermarkets offer a money-back guarantee on the meat they sell. Some even offer double your money back. But let's face it. There's no way anyone can really pay you back for a tough, tasteless steak that spoils your dinner. That's why you want to be right the first time. You want "choice", not chance. Ralphs, the Super meat market, offers a complete satisfaction of USDA Choice grade beef plus, Ralphs satisfaction guarantee...Don't settle for less.

ORDINANCE NO. 1194

AN ORDINANCE EXTENDING AN INTERIM MORATORIUM ON THE FILING OF APPLICATIONS FOR PARCELING OF LAND, REZONING BUILDING PERMITS FOR ANY NEW CONSTRUCTION OR CONVERSION OF RESIDENTIAL STRUCTURES TO COMMERCIAL STRUCTURES AND/OR OTHER CHANGE OF USES IN AN AREA CONSISTING OF 400 FEET ON EACH SIDE OF THE CENTERLINE OF EUCLID AVENUE EXTENDING FROM THE CITY'S SOUTH CITY LIMITS TO THE SOUTH SIDE OF EUGENE COURT

The City Council of the City of Upland does ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. FINDINGS

That heretofore on the 2nd day of October, 1978, the City Council adopted Ordinance No. 1182 imposing an interim moratorium on the filing of applications for parceling land, rezoning building permits and other change of uses in an area consisting of 400 feet on each side of the centerline of Euclid Avenue extending from the City's south City Limits to the south side of Eugene Court for a period of one-hundred fifty (150) days from adoption of said ordinance for the 2nd day of October, 1978.

That the law made and provided allows said period to be extended after hearing. That upon the hearing for the extension of said interim ordinance it was determined by the City Council that additional time is required to finish the comprehensive plan and land use regulations for the area to be studied.

SECTION 2. EXTENSION OF MORATORIUM

For an additional period of one-hundred fifty (150) days from the adoption of this ordinance extending the Interim Ordinance No. 1182, no land use permits, including building permits and conversions of residential to commercial use, shall be issued by the City nor shall any zoning, rezoning or parcel maps be adopted by the City on any property in an area extending 400 feet from each side of the centerline of Euclid Avenue from the City's south City Limits to the south side of Eugene Court.

SECTION 3. EXEMPTIONS

The same exemptions shall apply in the extended period of this ordinance as applied to the period of the original interim moratorium.

SECTION 4. URGENCY AND TAKING EFFECT

This Ordinance is an urgency ordinance and is for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and welfare. The facts constituting the urgency are those set forth in the Findings above-mentioned and in the Findings set forth in Ordinance No. 1182. The City recognizes that it will take substantial time for the Planning Commission and the City Council to study and consider all the facets required to be studied to make a plan for the area above-mentioned which protects the aesthetic beauty of Euclid Avenue and to provide substantial development which will not be detrimental to the standards of traffic circulation, population density, and which will not be detrimental or injurious to the property and improvements of the neighborhoods now located on Euclid Avenue.

SECTION 6

The Mayor shall sign this Ordinance extending the effectiveness of Ordinance No. 1182, and the City Clerk shall certify to the passage and adoption of this Ordinance, and said Ordinance shall be effective immediately upon its adoption by this Council as an urgency Ordinance.
